

When we first started shopping for our first home we must have sounded pretty ambiguous - we wanted something that felt like "us," something "unique." It was a mood more than a concrete description. But Evan was enthusiastic about looking at all our options, shaping our requirements as we went, while giving us sound advice about getting the most for our money and keeping resale value in mind. When I found a tiny house in the neighborhood we wanted to live in Evan figured out the cost per square foot and compared it to others in the area. When we were disappointed that a much larger house across the street was probably way out of our price range and had only a "for lease" sign, Evan followed up and found out they were willing to sell. He helped us settle on a price we were very comfortable with, and now we own a home we could stay in for many years or easily resell. We love our house and would never have made an offer without Evan's diligent research and guidance. It suits both our current and future needs perfectly, and we constantly remark how we feel so lucky to live there. If we ever sell our house we would not hesitate to call Evan to be our realtor.

Chanel Fishing